

June 16, 2014

Describe your bedroom without using any form of the verb : "to be" (am, is, are, was, were, be, being, been - not even as a helping verb.

My bedroom has a very limited size. My large, queen-sized bed consumes most of the space in my room. Next to my bed stands a wooden bedside table, covered in an assortment of various items, including a lavender-scented Yankee candle, a small lamp, headphones, and several library books. Across from my bed stands a tall black bookshelf, crammed with all my favorite novels. My clothes and jackets lie scattered across the carpet floor. A beam of sunlight streaming through my window above my bed illuminates my rooms.

Emily's comments: I found that as I was writing, I had to keep on substituting other words for the word "is" or "are". The assignment was pretty difficult, but I liked it!

Teacher's comments: You came up with very dramatic, dynamic, descriptive VERBS - neat trick, no?